b) 'Brief Writeup':

Women Empowerment Cell, GITAM Deemed to be University, Visakhapatnam, organised a virtual Workshop, “Stress & Coping: Strategies to De-Stress” for the faculty of Higher Education across the globe. The objective is to facilitate understanding of stress, and help apply coping strategies at personal and professional level for holistic wellness. The awareness is not only to increase job productivity, but also for the general well-being of an individual.

The Workshop was inaugurated at 9:00 am on 12th June by the Honorable President of GITAM, Shri. M. Sri Bharat and Honourable Vice-Chancellor of GITAM, Prof. K. Siva Rama Krishna. Dr. Stephanie M Le Melle delivered her keynote address on ‘Women Empowerment: Stress & Coping’. Dr Stephanie explained many roles played by women majorly in three domains. A woman’s role in family - taking care of Children, Elders, Spouse, Home etc., and her role in Social, Political & Community; in Celebrations, friendships, Nurturing the Connections of Community have been elucidated. How effectively women are accomplishing the assigned duties and how effectively they are playing those roles have been described by the speaker. The need for self-care and wellness for women was emphasized. Dr. Sasidhar Gunturu began his keynote speech titled ‘Stress and Strategies to De-stress’ by defining what stress is in simple and understandable words. He explained a term pandemic brain fog which includes difficulty in planning, difficulty in getting things done, overtly worried about the future and procrastination. The speaker gave courage to the people by saying that Covid 19 is attacking most of the people. So, one need not worry that he/she is the only victim. He said that 76% of Americans say Covid is a significant stressor.

The 2 -day Workshop saw eminent Resource Persons across India who interacted with the participants and gave them useful tips on topics: Psychometric Assessment of Stress and Coping, Teacher Stress & Well-Being, Effects of Stress on Physical Health, Managing Teacher Stress, Stress Management Through Yoga, Psychiatric Consequences of Stress & Stress Management Techniques, Power of Breath for Stress Management, and Understanding the Nature of Stress in Classrooms.

'Covid is exposing women to greater health risks'

HANS NEWS SERVICE
VISAKHAPATNAM

COVID-19 is exposing women to greater health risks, threatening livelihoods, gender-based violence and forcing them and children into extreme poverty, particularly those living in the marginalised communities, observed Dr. Stephanie M Le Melle, Columbia University Medical Center Public Psychiatry Education Director and Clinical Psychiatry Associate Professor here on Saturday.

Delivering a keynote address at the global workshop on 'Stress coping: strategies to de-stress' organised by GITAM Deemed to be University's women empowerment cell, she mentioned 10 per cent of working women missed work weekly to meet childcare needs.

Referring to the recent studies, she said 54 per cent of women lost their jobs during the pandemic globally.

Addressing the participants, GITAM president M Sriharath said Covid-19 pandemic caused tremendous psychological pressure on students and the academic community as they face a unique set of challenges and lack awareness on how to deal with the same. Further, he said the institution was considering all precautions to handle the stress through various platforms.

The institution's Vice-Chancellor K Sivaramakrishna said health was not only influenced by the physical body but the spiritual, mental and social relations should be accorded equal priority. Columbia University Psychiatric Integrative Services Director Dr. Sasidhar Gunturu and Tata Institute of Social Sciences (TISS) Center for Excellence in Teacher Education Associate Professor Gomathi Jatin shared insights about the subject.

The institution's School of Gandhian Studies director Dr Nalini Bikkina said certain levels of stress needed to face challenges and for professional growth.

Experts stress on alleviating anxiety through meditation

VISAKHAPATNAM: Helping others during the Covid-19 crisis can help one's own emotional, financial well-being, particularly helping others in a crisis can be an effective way to alleviate stress and anxiety, suggested psychiatrist G Bhagya Rao here on Sunday.

Delivering a special talk in a global workshop on 'Stress coping: strategies to de-stress' organised by GITAM Deemed to be University's Women Empowerment Cell, he informed that finding ways to give back during COVID-19 will help lower one's own anxiety and stress. Sharing his recent observations, Dr Bhagya Rao said 30 per cent of patients were under mental stress because of illness, living situation and financial issues. He mentioned that instead of using medicines to cope with stress related problems, one can practice meditation and help lead a peaceful and meaningful life. Addressing the participants, Clinical psychiatrist at Ambedkar University-Delhi Dr Shefali Singh informed that the shift to virtual mode was causing stress and workload to the teaching community. "We must create a new knowledge environment to overcome the stress levels," she added. Art of Living faculty S Harish, GITAM Women Empowerment Cell chairperson Challa Surekha and workshop convener Swathi Chikkala participated.
